February 2016

Hi Friends —

The facts: Ted Cruz was born in Canada to a Cuban father and an American mother. He held dual Canadian and American citizenship until he renounced the Canadian bit last summer.

Cruz may be a "natural-born citizen" of the US, and so constitutionally eligible to run for president, or he may not. He, of course, says he is and that this is a matter of "settled law." But many constitutional scholars say, "not so fast." This is not a matter of settled law, they argue, because no court has ever ruled on it, and it never will be settled until the Supreme Court has the final word. Now when it comes to the Constitution I am no "originalist." The concerns that once may have made this technicality necessary are no longer present, specifically the notion that an agent of a foreign power or a person of divided or questionable loyalty might become commander-in-chief. In the twenty-first century that's just preposterous and far-fetched.

I feel in our democracy any child raised in the US — even if he or she were born elsewhere and then naturalized — should enjoy same right and privilege to serve his or her country as president as do narrowly and vaguely defined "natural-born citizens." The condition of growing up American in America should be sufficient, regardless of the accident of one's birthplace. To advocate otherwise seems implicitly xenophobic. So I think it should just be a moot point and set aside.

And frankly, there are infinitely more compelling reasons that Ted Cruz should not ever be president of the United States. I say let Cruz run for the Republican nomination, let him win it if he can, and let him lose in November, which he will.

Keep list'nin',
Bob

QUOTES OF THE MONTH

João Gilberto to Antonio Carlos Jobim (in Portuguese): Tom, tell that gringo he's a moron.

Jobim to Stan Getz (in English): Stan, João said to tell you that he's always dreamed of making a record with you.

Getz to Jobim: Funny, by the tone of his voice I don't think that's what he's really saying.

NEW & RECOMMENDED CDS

Arturo O'Farrill: Boss Level (Zoho): The prolific, multi-Grammy award nominated pianist-composer Arturo O'Farrell may perform solo, as the leader of his Afro Latin Jazz Orchestra, or in virtually every format in between. Here he heads a strong sextet in a diverse set of music that is typically challenging, original, and contemporary. The group includes O'Farrill's talented sons Adam (on trumpet) and Zack (on drums), both of whom contribute original compositions.

Renee Rosnes: Written in the Rocks (Smoke Sessions): Science meets art in this remarkable release from pianist-composer Renee Rosnes. Informed by the discoveries of Darwin and recalling the tone poems of Ellington, Rosnes' ambitious seven-movement work, The Galapagos Suite, traces in vivid, tuneful sound the emergence and evolution of life on this planet. Steve Wilson on saxophones and flute, vibist Steve Nelson, bassist Peter Washington, and drummer Bill Stewart assist her in this awe-inspiring project.

Lew Tabackin: Soundscapes (self-released): On both tenor saxophone and flute Lew Tabackin has a distinctive sound and a singular concept, and he displays them abundantly on his new pianoless trio CD. Bassist Boris Kozlov and drummer Mark Taylor provide sensitive support and leave ample space for Tabackin's immense improviser's imagination to work its magic.

Ray Vega & Thomas Marriott: Return of the East-West Trumpet Summit (Origin): The "East" is Vermont resident (and Bronx-born) Ray Vega. The "West" is Seattle native Thomas Marriott. Joined by George Colligan on the Hammond B-3 organ and drummer Matt Jorgensen, these two accomplished trumpeters collaborate comfortably, closely, and brilliantly in a program laced with hard bop and highlighted by a relaxed, intimate treatment of Erroll Garner's "Misty."
