May 2013

Hi Friends —

During the administration of George W. Bush, in order to dispute the highly plausible notion that he is a functional illiterate, the White House released his "summer reading list." It comprised a book about Lincoln and the evangelical movement (maybe), a biography of Roberto Clemente (well, Bush is a baseball guy, although #21's humanitarianism would have been lost on him), and a biography of J. Robert Oppenheimer. Did they really think anyone would believe that Bush, even if he had someone read the book to him, could have comprehended either Oppenheimer's science or politics?

So it was with amusement mixed with disgust that I watched, on April, 25, the dedication of the oxymoronic "Bush Presidential Library" in Dallas, the only library where if your book is overdue, the patron who comes in after you must pay your fine. The other four living presidents — Carter, Bush Sr., Clinton, and Obama — were there to heap phony praise, the Democrats doing it through gritted teeth and frozen smiles, on history's worst president. But in one of the farce's few honest moments, Clinton "jokingly" called Bush's new house of lies "the latest, grandest example of the eternal struggle of former presidents to rewrite history" (and he should know about that).

And there is plenty of history to rewrite: the stolen 2000 election, the pre- \(and post-\) 9/11 intelligence blunders, the unjustified and unjust Iraq War, torture, "mission accomplished," the Hurricane Katrina debacle, the failed attempt to privatize Social Security \(a lucky break, there\), the financial meltdown, the loss of respect for the US around the world. Hell, to rewrite all that Bush may need a second library!

"In the end, leaders are defined by the convictions that they hold," Bush told the fawning crowd that day. Or in his case, by the convictions that he never held and never had.

Stay cool and keep list'nin'
Bob

P.S.: The Bush Library opened to the public on May 1, the tenth anniversary of Bush's declaration of "mission accomplished" in Iraq.

QUOTES OF THE MONTH

Jonathan Winters was the model of the guy who always questioned authority. And where he is now, God better be on his best behavior.

— Mort Sahl

Jonathan's improvs on Mork & Mindy were legendary. ... Sometimes I would join in, but I felt like a kazoo player sitting in with Coltrane.

— Robin Williams

NEW & RECOMMENDED CDS

Michael Dease: Coming Home (D Clef): The next major force on the jazz trombone has arrived and he is Michael Dease. Joined here by a stellar cast — alto saxophonist Steve Wilson, pianist Renee Rosnes, bassist Christian McBride, drummer Ulysses Owens, Jr. — Dease builds on the success of his previous release, Grace, further securing his spot in the front rank of players (and writers) on that challenging and beautiful instrument called the trombone.

Maniacal 4: Carry On (Armored Records): Maniacal 4 is a talented trombone quartet — Alex Dubrov, Matt Jefferson, Nick Laufer, Carl Lundgren — whose hallmarks are versatility, wit, and bold originality. And they hardly can get any bolder or more original than they do on this recital of 1970s rock anthems by Kansas, Toto, Queen, and more, transformed by Lundgren's masterly arrangements, backed by a killing rhythm section, and played with their usual fire and fun.

Adriana Miki: Mulata de Arroz: Lisbon-based Brazilian singer Adriana Miki has an engaging voice which she uses in a most appealing way. Her repertoire is alternately rhythm-driven and sensuous with occasional surprises, notably her lovely duet, "Caracendo," with pianist Paulo Barros, and "Kutsu Ga Naru," a folk song sung in — yes — Japanese. Her fine vocals are further enhanced by sensitive solos and obligatos by saxophonist-clarinetist Desidério Lázaro.

Swingadelic: Toussaintville (Zoho): Swingadelic's last CD was a swinging tribute to a giant of straight-ahead modern jazz, Duke Pearson. Its latest CD is an eclectic tribute to a giant of contemporary music, Allen Toussaint. With memorable arrangements, strong solos, and soulful vocals, bassist-musical director Dave Post's resourceful band returns to its comfort zone of joyful blues and jazz-based funk, the combination that has made it a cross-genre favorite.

The release party for Swingadelic's Toussaintville CD is on Monday, May 13, 9:00-11:00 at Maxwell's, 1039 Washington Street, Hoboken, NJ; 201-798-0406. FREE!
