October 2014

Hi Friends —

October 11 marks the seventieth anniversary of the release of my favorite film of all time, Laura. Based on a novel by Vera Caspary and directed by Otto Preminger for Twentieth Century-Fox, it's a tale of deceit, jealousy, and murder among Manhattan's "smart set." This landmark film noir raises the genre from the gutter to the penthouse and boasts a stellar cast: Gene Tierney (in the title role), Dana Andrews, Clifton Webb (making his film debut as the effete columnist, "Waldo Lydecker"), Vincent Price, and Judith Anderson.

Among the many elements that contributed to making this film a masterpiece is the haunting title music, reprised throughout the movie, composed by David Raksin. The melody proved so infectious, so memorable, that a lyricist — Tin Pan Alley veteran Irving Caesar — was engaged to turn the tune into a hit song, but his attempt was rejected by Raksin. "Who are you to turn this down?" he was asked by the publisher. "The composer, that's who," he shot back. "Well, who would you like?" Raksin didn't hesitate. "Johnny Mercer." So our greatest lyricist, the man I call "America's Poet," came on to craft one of his greatest lyrics, and transformed a movie theme into a popular song, and then an enduring standard.

On my October 12th edition of Just Jazz, during the "Just Jazz Presents ..." hour (starting at midnight Eastern Time), I will be commemorating and celebrating both the film and its music with a special segment I'm calling, "Laura, but She's Only a Dream." The program combines dialogue clips with performances of the title song to recount, in capsule form, the plot of Laura. (And if you tune in to my October 12 On the Dance Floor program, from 10:00 to 11:00 a.m., you'll hear even more classic versions of "Laura.") So join me then for some original programming I know you will enjoy.

Stay cool and keep list'nin',
Bob

QUOTES OF THE MONTH

I should be sincerely sorry to see my neighbors' children devoured by wolves.

I don't use a pen. I write with a goose quill dipped in venom.

In my case self-absorption is completely justified. I have never discovered any other subject quite so worthy of my attention.

— "Waldo Lydecker" as portrayed by Clifton Webb in Laura (1944)

NEW & RECOMMENDED CDS

Akiko: Commencement (self-released): This latest release from Japanese-born Hammond organist Akiko is in the funky, finger-poppin' tradition of the B-3 masters. Swinging standards, catchy originals, and even a few well rendered pop tunes, plus solid contributions by guitarist John Hart and drummer Jeff Hamilton, make this an essential organ trio date.

Laura Dreyer: Vida. Arte. Amor. (Mayimba Jazz): From the very first track it's clear that saxophonist-flutist Laura Dreyer is an accomplished specialist in Brazilian musical genres. Recorded in Rio de Janeiro with a fine roster of Brazilian instrumentalists and singers, this engaging CD showcases Dreyer's skills as a player, composer, and arranger.

Laura Dubin: Introducing the Laura Dubin Trio (self-released): Pianist Laura Dubin is a new face on the current jazz scene, and from this, her debut recording as a leader, she is likely to become a key player before very long. Not just a strong improviser, Dubin also is a talented writer, creating a program of original pieces that are clever, descriptive, and very listenable.

Jason Jackson: Inspiration: (Jack & Hill Music): With a string quartet on six tracks and a full string section on the other four, trombonist Jason Jackson's current release is not your run-of-the-mill big band session. Dense, rich ensembles serve as the setting for high-level soloists including, in addition to Jackson himself, trumpeters Terell Stafford and Roy Hargrove, trombonist Slide Hampton, saxophonists Steve Wilson and Rich Perry, and bassist Rufus Reid.
