

JAZZ APPRECIATION: Black American Music Since 1900

Rutgers Cinema One, Livingston Campus

We have a natural human tendency to take the safe route – to do the thing we know will work – rather than taking a chance. But that’s the antithesis of jazz, which is all about being in the present. Jazz is about being in the moment, at every moment. It’s about trusting yourself to respond on the fly. If you can allow yourself to do that, you never stop exploring, you never stop learning, in music or in life.

– pianist-composer Herbie Hancock

The bottom line of any country is, what did we contribute to the world? We contributed Louis Armstrong.

– singer Tony Bennett

Jazz is America's greatest cultural gift to the world, a gift originally fashioned by the first and second generations of free black Americans from diverse musical sources. Today jazz, having blossomed from its humble folk roots, is performed, listened to, and loved by people in every nation on the planet, a true "world music."

This course surveys the evolution of jazz in America, from its roots in the black folk music of the 1800s to its current styles and genres. It also examines the influence that jazz and jazz musicians have had on popular music and vice versa. And a particular emphasis of this course is learning how to listen to and appreciate recorded and live jazz performances.

Class presentations will feature recorded audio examples as a way to illustrate and enhance the course material and stimulate discussions. From time to time I also will email you video clips of some of the artists we’ve covered in class. Assignments include required readings, radio listening, and concert attendance. While the material is targeted to non-music majors – absolutely no jazz or general musical background is required – the course also will be of equal interest to experienced musicians and jazz fans.

Assessment

The course will serve to satisfy SAS requirements for the following Core Curriculum Goals:
AH:p.: Analyze arts in themselves and in relation to specific histories, values, languages, cultures, and technologies. Student achievement of these Core Goal wills be measured in the various class assignments and projects (see details below).

Required Texts

John F. Szwed, Jazz 101, New York: Hyperion, 2000. ISBN: 978-0195012699

Rex Stewart, Jazz Masters of the 30s, New York: DaCapo, 1982. ISBN: 978-0306801594

Amazon links for these books can be found on www.jazzbob.com.

Other required readings will be posted on www.jazzbob.com.

The lesson plan, below, outlines the reading that should be completed prior to each class. Generally, the readings will be expanded on during class meetings and included in the exams.

Website

All class handouts, assignments, additional readings, and examples of musical concepts and jazz genres introduced in class will be posted on my website, www.jazzbob.com, and can be accessed via the home page by clicking the link, “For Rutgers Students.”

Grading

Grade assessments are based on the following components:

1. midterm and final exams
2. concert review assignment
3. listening journal
4. class attendance
5. class participation

Components are weighted as follows toward your final course grade:

- midterm exam – 1/3
- final exam – 1/3
- concert review, listening journals, class participation – 1/3

Exams

Exams will consist of a written portion and a listening portion. The written component will require knowledge of historical facts, key individuals and their importance, and the forces that have shaped the evolution of jazz. The listening component may include identifying the style or form, as well as other key elements, of a particular recording.

Concert Reviews

Students must attend one concert performance selected from a list to be announced. (These can be on-campus events.) After the concert you will write and submit a concise concert review based on guidelines outlined in a separate handout. Reviews should be no less than 300 words, typed only. It is recommended that reviews be submitted within one week after the performance, either in class or by email. (Listening to a recorded version of a performance is not an acceptable alternative to attending.)

Listening Assignments

Beginning with the second week of the course, students are required to listen to one hour of jazz radio programming each week and keep a journal of their listening. (You may, of course, listen to more than that.) Listening Journals will be handed in three times this semester for evaluation. (The dates are specified in the course outline.) The full completion of this assignment is critical – you cannot do well in this course without spending adequate time on it.

The journals should be typed only, and may be submitted to me either in class on the days they are due or by email (as attachments) by midnight of that day. Inordinately late submissions will be dropped one grade. A discussion of Listening Journal formats and content, and a list of suggested jazz radio programs, appears in a separate handout.

Attendance and Participation

Since listening to jazz is a central focus of this class, regular and consistent attendance is essential for the successful completion of the course. An inordinate number of unexcused absences will result in the lowering of your semester grade by one point: i.e., an “A” is lowered to a “B+,” etc.

Students are encouraged to raise questions and offer their reactions and opinions about the topics and the music presented in class.

Learning Outcomes

Students who regularly attend class, keep up with the assigned readings, and complete all of the assignments in a timely manner can expect to come away from the course with the following skills:

- Ability to trace the historical and sociological contexts of jazz’s origin and evolution
- Ability to identify distinctive African-American aesthetic elements inherent in the jazz tradition, as well in American popular music generally
- Ability to discuss the development and characteristics of specific jazz styles and genres
- Ability to explain how jazz has both influenced and been influenced by other forms of music
- Ability to listen to live and recorded jazz performances with a greater depth of appreciation and enjoyment.

In addition, it is expected that students will gain a special insight into the lives, careers, contributions, and personalities of the creative people who have made, and continue to make, this vital music.
